THE SCHOOL SONG

Once more our voices lift in joyous sound,
All we who once again assemble here,
In love, in joy, and common service bound,
We celebrate the passing of a year.
Now proudly let your voices ring,
And sing our chorus with a swing.

Play the game for all you're worth,
Play the game for all you're worth,
Keep your eye upon the ball,
Smile although your wickets fall,
Play the game for all you're worth.

We sometimes stumble when on life's highway,
But rise again and strive to reach the height,
Where honour lies—our goal in work and play,
The good name of our school—its truest might.
Now proudly, etc.

Our thoughts go out to all those absent, who
In far-flung posts of Empire stand alone ;
Their courage, pride of race should us imbue
With that great spirit which is England's own.
Now proudly, etc.

Once more our voices lift in joyous sound,
All we who once again assemble here,
In love, in joy, and common service bound,
To speed the parting, greet the coming year.
Now proudly, etc.
